The American Cranberrybush Viburnum is not a true cranberry, but it still offers many of the same benefits. It is a 4-seasons specimen with white, lacecap flowers in late summer, burgundy fall color, and long lasting, glossy red berries through the winter. It grows well in a variety of soils and prefers moist areas. Its berries attract wildlife. It is very tolerant: wet sites, partial shade, wind, and urban pollution. (Zones 2 - 7)
