Delicate looking yet strong, the Columbine offers stunning blooms early in the spring. 'Swan Burgundy and White' continues to bloom into early summer. The columbine readily self-sows and can sprout new plants as the years go by, renewing themselves and creating drifts of blooms. Their soft, fern-like foliage sprouts early in the spring. Plants that are showy in mid to late summer and fall are best companions for Columbine: ornamental grasses, salvia, coneflower, daisies, and sedum. (Zones 3 - 8)
