The Japanese Flowering Crabapple offers red buds that open in spring to fragrant, pale pinkish flowers that mature to white. Flowers are followed by crabapples with a red blush. The Latin name, 'floribunda' refers to the abundant profusion of blooms and fruits this crabapple produces. The fruits do not usually persist beyond fall. It has a wide, spreading canopy that is wider than it is tall. Crabapples prefer to have full sun and well drained soil. (Zones 4-8)
