The Norway Maple has a high tolerance to many problems, which makes it a relatively easy tree to grow. When full grown it has a nice rounded foliage throughout the growing season. It also provides great coverage due to the leaves that can get up to 7 inches wide. The fall color of the Norway maple is an insignificant yellow, but what it lacks in fall color it makes up for in durability. It is tolerant of heat and drought, and it can tolerate a majority of urban pollutants. (Zones 3 - 7)
