The Canada Red Chokecherry features showy chains of fragrant white flowers that hang below the branches in mid spring. Leaves emerge green in the spring and change to a deep purple in the summer, and fall display is a warm purple. The black pea-sized cherry-like fruits ripen in mid summer, and attract birds and other wildlife. The fruits can also be used in jams or jellies. The Canada Red Chokecherry is a self-pollinating variety that is drought tolerant and winter hardy once established.
